The American Civil War (1861-1865) and the Reconstruction era that followed completed the revolution smashing the 254-year-old system of slavery in the American South and transforming the nation. The twelve years that composed the post-war Reconstruction era (1865-1877) witnessed a seismic shift in the meaning and makeup of our democracy with millions of former slaves and free Black people. The PBS production Reconstruction America after the Civil War, executive produced and hosted by Henry Louis Gates Jr., presents this new history and presents it as an engaging to a remarkable degree. He states it was the slaves themselves who were the catalysts of emancipation and ultimately the end of the Civil War, thus the Civil War and Reconstruction contributed to consistent changes in the US society among which the abolition of slavery was the main change that took place in the US in that time. However, the abolition of slavery as the primary goal of the Civil War brought African Americans freedom but not equal rights, liberties, and opportunities.
